Five Years Ago Today

Ledger and Times File
June 20, 1950

Five Murray boys leave today for "Boy's State," being held this year at Fort Knox.

Attending the event will be Bud Tolley, Nelson Garrison, Gene Hendon, Charles Waldrop, and Meredith Rogers.

The boys are being sponsored by the Young Business Men's Club, Rotary, Lions, Woodmen of the World, and the American Legion.

Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Bondurant and son, James, and daughter, Betty Bondurant left Sunday for Lexington. The family will stay four weeks while Mr. Bondurant does special graduate work in farm management at the University.

Mr. Bondurant is Associate County Agent in Farm Management with offices here in Murray.

H. B. Crisman, son of Mr. Hollie Crisman of Murray, was among the 250 graduates to be granted degrees during the June commencement at the University of Denver. Crisman studied accounting at the large Colorado school.

Ernest E. Smith, 73, died Sunday afternoon at the Murray General Hospital following an illness of one month.

Mr. Smith operated the General Merchandise Store Methodist Church.

The marriage of Miss Jewel Thomas and James Wilford Duke, was solemnized Friday, June 16th at the home of Rev. J. W. Thomas at Miller Cross Road.

Rev. Thomas performed the marriage ceremony of Miss Thomas' parents twenty years ago.

Mrs. Doris Young was elected president of the South Murray Homemakers Club Friday, June 16th at a meeting 12th Street.

Molotov And Company Wearing New "Friendly Look" At Meet

By GEORGE COFFEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
SAN FRANCISCO, June 18 (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Vyacheslav M. Molotov, wearing the friendly Russian "new look," was scheduled to arrive today for the historic 10th anniversary meeting of the United Nations.

The crack streamliner "City of San Francisco" with the Russian delegation's four special cars in tow was due to pull into Southern Pacific's Oakland station across the bay this afternoon.

Platoons of U.S. State Department security officers and Russian MVD secret service agents were standing by to greet the Communists. Molotov and his entourage will be escorted immediately to the $400,000 mansion the Soviets have rented at suburban Hillsborough south of San Francisco.

Weekend of Preparation
Molotov was expected to go into seclusion at his rented palatial retreat and make no public appearances before the formal opening of the U. N. conference Monday.

The foreign minister presumably planned to use the weekend to prepare for his scheduled meeting with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, British Foreign Secretary Harold MacMillan and French Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay.

If Molotov's previous public appearances during the cross-country train trip were any indication, the once-solemn diplomat could be expected to put on a show of unusual cordiality on his arrival here.

At New York the grey-haired, bespectacled foreign minister broke all previous Russian convention by amiably touring a museum and taking a stroll along the Hudson River.

In Chicago he went for another walk, along Lake Shore Drive and took a look at the stockyards. At Cheyenne, Wyo., the usually poker-faced official smilingly donned a cowboy hat.

But at Omaha, Molotov's transcontinental trip was dampened by a delegation of displaced Latvians.

and Latvians who demonstrated around the train with signs saying, "Molotov go to hell instead of San Francisco."

Advance Party Amiable
An advance Russian party, including several Soviets direct from Moscow, already had set up housekeeping in the plush Hillsborough mansion.

Molotov apparently sent his aides on ahead with firm instructions to present an amiable front. When one advance group arrived by plane all of the Russians aboard wore broad smiles and chatted agreeably with newsmen.

A photographer asked the leader of the group, V. P. Suslov of the Soviet U.N. staff in New York, if he and his companions would pose for a picture.

"If you think it is necessary," the beaming Suslov said, "we are at your disposal."

28 Stills Seized In May Raids

Frankfort, Ky. — Agents of the State Alcohol Beverage Control Board participated in raids during May which resulted in confiscation of 28 moonshine stills, 17 arrests, destroyed 6,500 gallons of mash and seized 58 gallons of non-tax paid spirits, Chairman Gay C. Shearer reported today.

"Our efforts not only are being directed at the policing of licensed beverage establishments," said Shearer "but also at those activities which constitute a violation of local option laws, and are a threat to the operations of the legitimate licensee."

Mine Safety Checked Urged By Officials

Frankfort, Ky. — All Kentucky coal mine operators were urged today to "immediately check their operation for fire hazards and remove them as soon as practicable," by A. D. Sisk, Chief of the Department of Mines and Minerals.

Two recent incidents were cited by Sisk of fires occurring in Kentucky mines due to failure to observe necessary precautions.

On May 22, a mine fire occurred in the Western Kentucky field, caused by a roof fall on energized feeder wires on a producing section. Sisk added, for failure to observe a Company rules and wiring plan which called for pulling of switches which would cut the electric current off side section.

"This was not done, and a fire resulted which required eight days labor on the part of fire fighters, who had to work under extremely hazardous conditions to extinguish the fire," added Sisk.

A belt fire occurred in an Eastern Kentucky mine May 31 for failure to use an automatic device for protection against belt slippage.

Mine fires can be prevented if simple rules governing application of electricity in coal mining are followed," Sisk added.

There were three fatalities in Kentucky coal mines last month — one each in the Kentucky River, Cumberland Valley and Big Sandy-Tug River fields — bringing to twenty-one the total for the year.

Reds Prepare For Revolt

BERLIN (AP) — East German Communists mustered full forces today against any recurrence of the workers' revolt that rocked the Soviet satellite empire on this date two years ago.

Jittery Red leaders alerted their entire security forces, including the 120,000 man police army, and placed guards on all government buildings, railway stations and other key points.

Evidence of the tension appeared Thursday night when several hundred Communists crossed into West Berlin and clashed with police. Authorities said 129 Reds were arrested during the club-swinging demonstration.

West Police On Alert
West Berlin police stood by today to prevent further riots which they believed were aimed at disrupting memorial services for victims of the 1953 uprising.

A police spokesman said the riots broke out without warning at three points in West Berlin, but were put down before they could get out of control. Police clubs were broken on the heads of the rioters in a series of sharp clashes before some 1,000 demonstrators were driven across the border.

East German government and party officials were warned not to travel in the zone except on urgent business. Rail journeys to Berlin were banned.

The June 17 anniversary is a public holiday in both West Berlin and West Germany and has been officially named "The Day Of Unity."

Farm Youth Reminded Of Shows

Frankfort, Ky. — Both 4-H and FFA farm youth were reminded today to prepare for the eight District Dairy Shows to be sponsored by the Department of Agriculture during August. Premium money in the shows will amount to $10,000.

Since 1951 the dairy shows have provided competition for 3,494 club youths. The shows have shown an increasing number of entries each year with 2,384 animals in last year's event.

According to Department of Agriculture officials the shows are conducted under the following entries:

Entries are restricted to regular enrolled 4-H Club and Future Farmer members who are carrying a dairy project with qualified participants permitted to show either purebred or grade animals. Only female animals are eligible to show and no club member will be permitted to enter more than three animals nor participate in more than one state-sponsored show.

This year's shows will be held at Mayfield, August 15; Madisonville, August 17; Campbellsburg, August 18; Somerset, August 23; Williamstown, August 24; Flemingsburg, August 25; and Shelbyville, August 26.

Peperhangers once signed their names on the walls they covered to date their handiwork. There are many instances where owners have discovered on removing wallpaper that it had been on the walls 100 years or more.

Fatalities From Current On Decrease

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Fatal accidents involving electric current have decreased in the past quarter century from nine per million population to seven per million in the United States, although the number of consumers of electricity has about doubled and the use of appliances and power tools has greatly increased, the statisticians report.

Safety campaigns fostered by the electric light and power companies and by other agencies are credited with having contributed to this improved record.

Fatal accidents from electric shock — which now take about 1,000 lives yearly in the United States — reach their peak during the summer, with more than two fifths of the year's fatalities occurring during June, July and August, according to the statisticians.

The higher mortality in the summer largely from increased activity in the repair and extension of electric lines, the generally greater amount of outdoor work, and the fact that the body is more likely to be wet from perspiration, with its resistance to electric shock consequently lowered.

About 95 percent of the fatalities annually occur among males, reflecting largely the effect of occupational hazards.

Accidents in the home account for one sixth of the deaths due to electric current among males, and for about four fifths of those among females. These home accidents are brought about by such varied circumstances as defective extension cords, the falling of a radio, fan, heater, or other appliance into a bathtub where a person is bathing, and children playing with exposed wires, light sockets, and defective appliances.

The rise of the "do it yourself" movement may possibly have contributed to the number of electrical accident fatalities in the home. For instance, there have been some deaths reported as the result of contact with high tension lines by persons attempting to install television aerials, the statisticians point out.

The Farm Corner

Push open the doors. Hook up that plow. The time to use it is here right now.

Your planting is next. And you're all set. You hope the weather won't be too wet.

Turn on the sprinkler. And soak the ground. Irrigation makes money. The practice is sound.

Make all the furrows. Long and straight. This is the season. When you feel great.

Then comes the time. To fertilize. You use a lot. 'Cause it's profit-wise.

The corn's laid by. You start your vacation. Planned work means time. For some recreation.

THE BOSS OF BROKEN SPUR

By Nick Summer

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

AS CAMERON approached his own house, he saw a lamp in the window. He heard the window softly till he could look through without being observed. What he saw satisfied him. He put up his horse and went in.

A man rose to greet him—a man with green eyes and a scarred face, whose trail-dusty clothes set with an incongruous elegance on his lean body.

"Hello, Lon," Cameron said quietly. "Wasn't expectin' you so soon."

The gambler grinned. "When you've got a game to play, why wait?"

"Anybody see you come in here?"

"I don't think so. What does it matter if they did? Nobody around here knows me."

"That's what you think. Rior-dan's here—and the redhead."

"Good. The green eyes glittered, and the long white gambler's hand moved unconsciously toward Calder's gun-belt. "I slipped up once, but I won't again."

"Take it easy, Lon," Cameron's voice was soft, but it carried command. "I got this thing all set up. You're not going to spoil it rushin' in too soon."

"All right, but when the time comes, remember, the redhead's mine, nobody else's."

"All right, all right," Cameron soothed him as he might have calmed a fractious child; then he gave way to mild impatience. "But remember, this is the biggest thing we ever pulled off. If it goes right, we'll neither of us have anything to worry about as long as we live. So don't be goin' off half-cocked just because some puncher beat your time with a dance-hall girl. No woman's worth it."

For a moment the gambler's eyes looked dangerous, but Cameron faced him down steadily. He'd always been able to handle Calder; that was why their partnership had lasted.

Calder—relaxed and grinned again. "You always were a cold-blooded proposition, Wayne. How you making out with your girl?"

"All right," Cameron said shortly. "She doesn't know it yet, but she'll come around in time."

"In time! Wayne, you're losing your touch. I expected to find you married by now."

"This isn't Lita," Cameron retorted. "This girl's smart. I've got to go slow. That was always your trouble, Lon, wantin' to rush things. Look what happened to Dodge. It was a good enough scheme, but you didn't take time to plug up the loop-holes."

"I suppose you think if you'd been there they wouldn't have got away?"

"Well, did we ever slip up on a job we worked together?" Cameron slapped his partner's shoulder. "We're a good team, Lon—your gun and my plannin'. Don't worry. I'll be plenty for you to do before we're finished."

"Well, anyway," Calder was still eager to justify himself, "even if those two did give me the slip, I settled their hash—in Dodge. If they ever live to get back there, they'll walk right into a rope."

"Yeah?"

"Yeah. Old Wharton's offered five thousand apiece for them." The gambler dug into his pocket and pulled out two crumpled reward dogtags.

"Here!" Cameron thrust out a hand. "Let me see those."

Calder handed them over reluctantly. "Not thinking about turning them over to the law, are you? Of course the money'd come in handy, but it'd be worth my share to have the fun of settling with Baines personally."

"Get it through your head," Cameron ordered impatiently. "With the stakes we're playin' for, five thousand is chicken-feed. But these may come in handy to get other ideas out of the way—if my other ideas don't work."

"I thought you figured Rior-dan wasn't important," Calder's long white finger played the dogtag. "I only worked him into this business because he played right into my hands."

"He's gettin' important," Cameron grunted. "He's a fly-by-night, fool, but he could mess things up. We got to get rid of him—an' we got to light a fire under these nesters. I thought Larrabee's killer'd do it, but they're scared. An' I got an idea," he smiled. "That just might kill both birds. You lie low tonight, Lon. I'm goin' to ride over an' pay Lita a visit I owe her."

Rusty was riding his second day's patrol. Nothing at all had happened to disturb or to enliven it. The redhead whistled Shave-a-Berry Road, ran his appreciative cowboy's eye over the rich short grass, and thought about Margie. There was a woman for you. Maybe one of these days he ought to marry her and settle down and raise half a dozen redheaded kids.

A horse and rider were approaching from the direction of the nester settlement. Rusty straightened, his hand going toward his gun; then, on a better view, he relaxed. It didn't seem likely that trouble would be coming in such a broken-down shape. The horse was a mangy, shambling-gaited rack of bones, and the rider matched it like a twin. A lank old scarecrow who rode slumped forward, chin on his dirty blue shirt front.

"Howdy?" the old man wheezed. "You tell me where I'd find Kerry Rior-dan?"

"You'd have a long ride," Rusty informed him. "He's over 't Slack T-an," he grinned. "I got my doubts if he'd want t'be interrupted. Was I you, I'd come back some other time."

"I got a letter for 'im. S'important," the scarecrow insisted.

"I'll be seen 'im tonight. I could give it to him if you want."

The old man squinted at Rusty with suspicious, watery eyes, then fumbled in the pocket of the ragged jeans and brought out a crumpled scrap of dirty paper. "Don't you be losin' it, young feller, you hear?" He handed it over with a shaky hand, kicked his horse into reluctant action, and rode off.

As Rusty tucked the paper into his breast-pocket, he couldn't help noticing that the sprawling writing was a woman's. He shook his head in mild disapproval. He'd never known any good to come of a man's nixing his women—but that was Kerry's business.

Kerry got back from Slack T barely in time for supper, and it wasn't till afterward that Rusty had a chance to slip him the note. It was brief and to the point.

"Kerry honey, I just got to see you. Please come tomorrow afternoon about three. I'll be alone then. Please come, Lita."

The second "please" was underlined with a heavy stroke of the pencil. Kerry scowled. He didn't want to see Lita. His flirtation, or whatever you wanted to call it, with her, was part of the foolishness he'd put behind him, and he hated to be reminded of it. It seemed cheap now, a shabby sort of infidelity to Christie.

But in the fullness of his happiness he didn't want to hurt anyone. Just to ignore Lita's appeal would be like a slap in the face. And maybe she was in some kind of trouble, turning to him for help. He'd have to go, he decided, just to explain to her as kindly as he could that he wouldn't be seeing her any more.

There were eyes watching him from the cottonwoods as he rode up to the Dawson shack. As soon as the door was safely closed behind him, Cory scrambled onto his horse and rode, as fast as the old rack of bones would carry him, for Double Diamond.

Calder sat at the table, dreading poker hands with a swirl, restless fingers. He looked up with a flicker of scornful amusement in his green eyes at the shuffling figure grinning in the doorway, and looked down at his cards again.

"Well?" Cameron snapped. "He come awright?" Cory announced. "And Larrabee?"

"He'll be there. You c'n count on my gal." Cory continued to grin expectantly.

West Hazel Club Has Regular Meet At Paschall Home

The West Hazel Homemakers met in the home of Mrs. Lillburn Paschall Friday, June 10, at ten o'clock in the morning.

Mrs. Otto Erwin, president, called the meeting to order. Nine members and three visitors — Mrs. Sam Overcast, Miss Blodine Moore and Mrs. Archie Merton — were present. Mrs. Overcast became a new member. New officers were elected for the coming year. Mrs. Ames Nesbitt will be the new president. Further plans were made for the picnic for the Lions Club. The club voted to have the annual picnic July 23 at the Paris Landing State Park.

Gardening and landscape notes were given by Mrs. T. W. Nesbitt. The recreation was led by Mrs. Herdrell Stockdale.

A delicious potluck lunch was served at the noon hour. The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Otto Erwin in September.

Trousseau Tea Is Given By Mrs. Kahn At Upchurch Home

Mrs. Jack Kahn of Oak Ridge, Tenn., entertained with a trousseau tea honoring her sister, Miss Elizabeth Fay Upchurch, whose marriage to Mr. Charles P. Shelby was an event of June 18.

The tea was held at the home of their mother, Mrs. George Upchurch, Olive Street, on Thursday June 16, from three-thirty to five-thirty o'clock in the afternoon.

For the lovely pre-nuptial occasion the honoree chose to wear from her trousseau a pink cotton satin dress with patent accessories. Her corsage, gift of the hostess, was of gardenias.

The tea table, overlaid with white cloth, was very beautifully appointed with a center arrangement of pink and white flowers and serving appointments all in crystal. Other arrangements of flowers in the dominant color of pink.

Serving with Mrs. Kahn were her sister, Miss George Ann Upchurch of Dallas, Texas, her aunt, Miss Ruth Houston, and her mother, Mrs. Upchurch. They each wore a corsage of gardenias.

Approximately thirty persons called during the afternoon to view the gifts on display in the home.

Bailey Home Scene Of Shower Given For Bride-elect

The home of Mrs. H. B. Bailey Sr., on Olive Street was the scene of the miscellaneous shower given in compliment to Miss Elizabeth Fay Upchurch who was married to Mr. Charles P. Shelby on Saturday.

Mrs. Bailey Sr., Mrs. H. B. Bailey Jr., and Mrs. Jack Jones of Union City, Tenn., were hostesses for the pre-nuptial occasion held Wednesday, June 15, at ten o'clock in the morning.

The honoree wore for the bridal event a powder blue embroidered pique dress with matching shoes. Her hostesses' gift corsage was of pink gladiolus.

Miss Upchurch was the recipient of many lovely gifts which she opened for the guests to view. Refreshments were served from the beautifully appointed table which was overlaid with a pink cloth centered with the magnificent Louis XIV epergne. Pink roses were used to enhance the table with the appointments all in silver. Mrs. Roy Fymer served the punch.

Attending the shower were approximately thirty persons.

Thousands To Be On Road On The Fourth

CHICAGO — What is the death rate in this country? Your own speedometer may give you the answer.

That advice to motorists who try to drive too far too fast on holidays was issued by the National Safety Council, which is coordinating a nationwide campaign aimed at reducing traffic accidents over the Fourth of July weekend. One hundred and sixty national organizations are participating in the campaign.

The Council estimates that more than 40 million vehicles will be on the move during the three-day weekend and that they will roll up more than three billion miles.

In such heavy traffic a driver is never more than a second away from an accident, the Council says. It is estimated that he must make from 20 to 50 decisions an hour — and a wrong one can be fatal.

Over the Memorial Day weekend, 368 persons were killed in traffic accidents. "If they had died in a nationwide epidemic the whole country would be taking frantic steps to see that it never happened again," Ned H. Dearborn, president of the Council, said. "But they did die from an epidemic — a highway epidemic we might call the three 'I's' — incompetence, indifference and irresponsibility."

Their deaths are a tragic reminder that too many of us have forgotten to use the Golden Rule in traffic. When we share a common highway, we are our brother's keeper in a very real sense. I believe the Memorial Day toll could have been cut in half if that attitude had prevailed more generally.

For a safer Fourth, the Council offers four driving tips:

1. Start early, before traffic is heavy. You can cover a lot of miles in relatively light traffic early in the day.
2. Don't compete in traffic — let the other fellow go first.
3. Don't follow the car ahead too closely. Double check before passing or changing lanes.
4. Above all, don't speed. Losing a little time is better than losing your life.

Foundational Class Has Meet At Home Mrs. John Bowker

The regular monthly meeting of the Foundational Sunday School Class of the First Baptist Church was held Friday, June 10, at seven thirty o'clock in the evening.

Mrs. John Bowker was hostess for the meeting held at her home in the Churchhill Apartments.

The inspirational devotion was very ably given by Mrs. Lloyd Horn. Mrs. Flavil Robertson, acting president, presided at the meeting.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Bowker to those present.
